

Current place name	Place Name Variants	Naming Power	When Named	Reason
Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam (named in 1976 by the unified communist state of Vietnam in honor of legendary communist revolutionary and leader of North Vietnam, Ho Chi Minh).	Saigon	France	1860s	French colonization of Vietnam for its rubber, spices, camphor etc; known as Indochine (along with Cambodia and Laos) under French rule.
Mumbai, India (named in 1995 when Hindu nationalist party came into power and sought to remove remnants of British rule)	Bombay	Portugal, Great Britain	1534	Portugal established a port trading base at present-day Mumbai, which they called Bom Bahia, meaning 'the good bay'. The British received Bombay as dowry in 1661 when Portuguese princess Catherine of Braganza married Prince Charles II. The British renamed it Bombay. (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mumbai)
Port Klang, Malaysia (renamed in 1972-largest port in Malaysia)	Port Swettenham	Great Britain	1901	Frank Swettenham, a British colonial administrator and first Resident general of the Federated Malay State, recommended the creation of a port to facilitate trade of tin and ore and connect the port to both railway and sea. (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Port_Klang)

Busan, South Korea	Fuzan	Japan	1910	When Korea was under Japanese rule, Japan sought to create a modern port in present-day Busan that connected with ferry service to Shimonoseki, Japan. (https://www.britannica.com/place/Pusan)
Tainan, Taiwan	Fort Zeelandia	Dutch East India Company	1624	The fort was built by the Dutch as both a base from which to attack their Spanish rivals who had claimed the northern tip of Taiwan and as a trading post for direct trade with China and the Dutch headquarters of Batavia (present-day Jarkarta) in Indonesia. (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tainan)